Army and Navy Board Would Change Armaments to Meet Conditions.

OFFER PLAN TO GARRISON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19 .- A joint board of army and navy officers submitted a report to-day to the Secretary of War on the advisability of a revision of the coast defence policy of the United States to meet the advancement in naval arma-

While the report is being held strictly confidential for the present, there is good reason to believe that it contains strong recommendations that a comprehensive and continuous programme be worked out for constant readjustment of the coast defences whenever necessary by advances in armaments or other changes in conditions which must be met in case undertaken at the direction of Secre-eary Garrison, who for some time has been giving attention to the discrepancy between the efficiency of our coast ard of guns for battleships. To this end he constituted a board headed by Assistant Secretary Breckinridge, representing the civil authority of the War Department: Brig. Gen. Crozier, chief of the ordnance bureau, charged with making deformance sures. the ordnance bureau, charged with making coast defence guns; Brig.-Gen. Kingman, chief of engineers, who supervises construction of fortifications; Brig.-Gen. Weaver, chief of coast artillery; Brig.-Gen. Scott, Chief of Staff of the Army. Capts. H. S. Kmapp and W. F. Shoemaker of the navy also were made members of the board. Gen. Scott's departure for the board. Gen. "Naval armament in the last few years has rapidly developed, particuin respect to the calibre of guns, their ranges and the rapidity with which fire can be delivered. At the present time the tendency to place on the higher type battleship guns as large as 15 inches calibre (in the British navy; rgest gun used at present in nited States is a 14 inch gun).

These guns, while carrying a proth our direct fire type of seacoast d higher power pressures, have a very distinct advantage in range, ex-ceeding that of our 14 inch guns from 2,000 to 3,000 yards. 14 inch guns

While this advantage in range is a degree offset by the instability the naval platforms and the s accurate methods of obtaining nges from ships than from land defences, there still appears to reain a distinct advantage in this reber of these calibre guns now being makes it necessary to give careful consideration to the question whether there should not be a change not only in the length, cal-

Deficiencies Are Realized.

The realization of the deficiencies of the American coast defences with constructed long since the coast fortifications were built has been growing in the minds of officers of army and navy. These views have to a cerian extra the coast of the coas
